HELL HATH NO FURY LIKE WOMAN SCORNE 'SLIM' TAYLOR FINDS

Whether or not Harvey Taylor had heard of the fury of a woman scorned, it was his defense before Justice Wheeler yesterday on a charge of embezzlement that he was being made the victim of such an awakened fury. He had been arrested on the complaint of Miss Alta Akers, a young woman lately the proprietress of a soft drink stand in Acire City. She said that she had entrusted him at one time with $40 and at another with $15, to deposit to the credit of her account at the Valley Bank, and that he had appropriated the money to his own use.

This Taylor denied. He said that the money had been given him by the prosecutrix in the course of a more or less persistent pursuit of him, to be used by him as he might see fit. Nothing had been said about depositing it in any bank. He said that he needed the money, and the complaining witness had it. At another time, when he was flush and she was not, he let her have all he had at the time, $4.

On cross-examination of Miss Akers it was brought out that she had no account at the Valley Bank at that time to be credited with that or any other deposit, and that she had not subsequently called at the bank to inquire as to whether her account had been fattened. She said, though, that some time later she went to the bank to open an account and learned that there was nothing to her credit.

In support of the statement of Taylor that he had been pursued by the complaining witness, a taxi driver, a friend of Taylor, said that he stopped at Miss Akers' place of business once while on his way back to town. In the course of a conversation with her she published the bans and stated that as soon as "Slim" that is Taylor, was divorced from his wife she was going to California with him to be married.

The taxi driver said that he told her that nothing was doing; that Slim had a kid that he thought too much of to leave for any woman. Then he said that the complaining witness offered to bet him $5 that she would marry Slim. The prosecutrix admitted this conversation, but she said that it was not a real bet; that it was what is commonly called a "jawbone" bet.

Justice Wheeler took the case under advisement, but in the meantime he lectured Taylor and advised him that it would insure to his benefit if he collected the money and repaid the complaining witness.
